I. THEMATIC EXAMINATION OF AMENDMENTS – GENERAL COMMENTS

The Secretariat received many amendments and comments concerning the Institutions, as well as a possible Article X to be inserted into the Title on democratic life. Three preliminary comments need to be made:

- The Secretariat endeavoured to draw up in the note below the most accurate list possible of the proposals and suggestions put forward with regard to institutional matters. Given the number, diversity and often complex and imaginative nature of these proposals and suggestions, some Convention members might feel that their proposal has not been described in enough detail. If so, the Secretariat asks the Convention members concerned to forward their comments.
- A number of the comments and amendments put forward by Convention members constitute additions or clarifications to the Praesidium text. It should be borne in mind that provisions on institutional matters will appear in Part [Two] [Three] of the Constitution. They will complete the provisions of Part One.
- A large number of the amendments received consist either directly or indirectly of maintaining the current institutional provisions as they are in the Treaty of Nice. Many Convention members are thus expressing their attachment to the current texts on institutional matters and argue in favour of keeping the status quo. This applies, particularly but not exclusively, to the composition of the European Parliament, the role and the Presidency of the European Council, calculation of the qualified majority, the procedure for appointing the President of the Commission, the appointment and composition of the Commission. It will be for the Convention to give its position on whether the mandate issued to the Convention by the European Council in Laeken can be fulfilled by introducing amendments confined to the Union's institutional provisions.
